The House Organized at Last!

REPUBLICAN SPEAKER ELECTED

THE UNION SAFE!

It will be seen, by our telegraphic despatches, that the long protracted contest for the Speakership was decided yesterday by the election of Gov. PENNINGTON, of New Jersey, a staunch Republican, and a true and tried man. We congratulate the Republicans in Congress and throughout the country, upon this auspicious result. It is "instructive to remark" that the Union has survived the shock and is none the weaker for the election of a Republican Speaker now, than it will be for the election of a Republican President next November.

THE SAINT PAUL MURDER.—At the Coroner's inquest, one of the little children of the deceased, who was in the house during the murder, was questioned carefully as to his recollection of what transpired. He stated that his father came home at night and struck his mother with an axe-handle, and then jumped on her, and in the morning he saw him wash her, and take off her under-clothes and burn them in the stove. The little boy was about six years old, and appeared intelligent. He stated several times that after he struck her with the axe-handle, that he jumped upon her, which accounts for the internal injuries discovered by the surgeons. Other and sufficient evidence was taken to warrant a verdict against the woman's husband.

WHO IS THE MAN?—Editors Sentinel:—I see by your paper this morning, that there is a "German" in this State who furnishes brains for Judge LABRABEE, our member of Congress. Would it not be well to institute an inquiry in your paper for the purpose of finding out who he is? So importante personage should be known. Yours, &c.,
Feb. 1, 1860. PERKINS.

A LADY'S FEET FROZEN WHILE SKATING.—A lady in Boston, a few days since, while skating on Jamaica pond, strapped her skates so tight about her feet as to prevent any circulation of blood in the part below the ankles. The consequence was, that upon taking them off to return home, her feet were both found to be frozen, Although every effort was made by physicians to restore them to a normal state, one of them was so badly frost-bitten as to render amputation necessary to prevent mortification from ensuing.

MICHIGAN STATE TEMPERANCE SOCIETY.—The Michigan State Temperance Society will assemble in Detroit on Tuesday, February 7th, and take measures to effect a more perfect organization of the temperance force in the State. Dr. JEWETT, of Boston, J. B. MERWIN, of Chicago, and other eminent speakers are expected to address the Convention in the evening. Free return tickets will be granted over the Detroit and Milwaukee Railroad.

GETTING READY.—A meeting of the Republicans was held in Buffalo on Saturday evening to initiate a system of organization for the Presidential campaign. Similar meetings are being held in various parts of the State. This is as it should be. The contest is to be a hard one, and the sooner the preliminary work is begun the more easily will the victory be achieved.

LARGE FIRES IN NEW YORK.—A ship and several printing offices were destroyed by fire New York on Saturday night. Among the latter were the offices in which the Ledger, Mercury, Spirit of the Times, &c., were printed. They were generally fully insured. The aggregate loss will reach nearly $200,000.

A MAMMOTH LUMP of silver ore from the Washoe mines, in Carson Valley, has been forwarded by Messrs. MORRISON, WALSH & Co., of San Francisco, to the Washington National Monument. It is two feet six inches long, ten inches wide, eight inches thick, weighs one hundred and sixty-three pounds, and is valued at $600.

THE RESIDENCE OF MR. FILLEY, Mayor of St. Louis, was entered on last Saturday night and robbed of $50 to $100 in plate and clothing. The thief, if discovered, will learn that to rob a magistrate, if not a greater crime than to rob a private citizen, is surer of punishment.

A NEW SENSATION PREACHER.—The Rev. Mr. GUINNESS, at Philadelphia, is said to rival the London SPURGEON in the sensation which he creates and the numbers who flock to hear his preaching.

MOONEY AND CLIFFORD, who were to have been hung at Dubuque, on Friday, have had new trials granted them, very much to the disappointment of a crowd who had assembled to witness the execution.

CONSIDERABLE EXCITEMENT seems to have been occasioned among the butchers of New York by the ox "Union." The live weight of which was 2,419 pounds, and when dressed, 2,319.

THE RACINE ADVOCATE announces that the Hon. A. D. SMITH, of Milwaukee, is to deliver a lecture in that city, before long, on "Agitation."

THERE WERE FOURTEEN DEATHS in the city of Racine during the month of January. The united ages of these amount to 286 years.

CASSIUS M. CLAY, in a letter to The Country Gentleman, states that for many years he has grazed a thousand head of cattle a year.

A PRIZE SKATING MATCH came off at Rochester last Friday. Five handsome prizes were competed for.

REV. W. A. BARTLETT lectured in Oswego on Friday evening last.

MR. WM. WAIN'S wagon factory was burned in Detroit on Monday morning.

THE Detroit papers announce the St. Clair river open.

FROM MADISON.

Superficiality—Tender-Hoofed, &c.

MADISON, Feb, 1, 1860.

DEAR SENTINEL:—Monday was a dull day in both Chambers. Many resolutions were postponed, on account of the weather, and other things. Mr. PALMER thought that if we have one fault, it is that we legislate too fast. Slow-and-sure, was the man who got the persimmons. I would suggest that while tortoise legislation may be better than fast legislation, staying at home might be best of all. There is much business done here, which could be entrusted to County Boards. Such laws as it is necessary to pass, should be studied and perfected. It would be an immense saving, if some commissioners were appointed to perfect laws which the Legislature might suggest as necessary. Pages and pages of trash are put on the Statute books, one minute, to be scraped out and new stuff put on the next minute.

SUPERFICIALITY.

Our most important laws do not live to be over one year old. They are like sun-flowers; great gaudy, sprawling things, all leaves and no seed. They flourish one brief sunny summer, and then are nipped by the "winter of our (Legislative) discontent." This is a bitter commentary on the superficiality of our law makers. Legislation has been mere baby play, and great bundles of bosh are sent up to the Speaker for his signature, that ought to be jammed into the stove. Can't they condense and crystalize the law? Why should every man who goes gathering in the fields of Legislative wisdom, come up here with a bundle of wheat and fling it down on the heads of the people in shape of law, unthrashed and unwinnowed? Why don't he clean it of straw and chaff, and bring us only the golden kernels? If this were done there would be no necessity for destroying laws every year. Let us have a good explicit assessment law, and then let it not be haggled and boggled and stretched, to cover every little sixpenny soul in the State. Let us have a good sound law on interest, that will kill off the Shylocks, and let poor folks live. If it is prepared with care, there need be no amendments to it afterward.

General laws which affect nearly every business relation of life, should be considered with great care, and when passed, they should be left untouched until time and experience suggests some valuable amendments. The trouble is, that men come here to distinguish themselves. They itch for fame.—They must tear down and re-build, so as to work their names into the corner-stones of the building. What folly this is. The next Legislature demolishes every law as if it were sent here for that very purpose; and then we have some more immortal corner-stones! Yet no one's fame lives beyond a twelve-month. The great men of the past years have not left even a coffin, or a tangled white thread from their shrouds. Their eminence, if they have any, has been won in some other position. What buying and selling, trading and "treating" to get votes, and crack the shell of obscurity, and to be hatched into this nest of honors. Why don't folks read Miss Kilmansegg? There might politicians see—

"What different dooms our birthday's bring!
For instance, one little manikin thing
Survives to wear many a wrinkle;
While death forbids another to wake,
And a son that it took nine moons to make,
Expires without even a twinkle!

TENDER-HOOFED, ETC.

GOODWIN made the best speech yet, on his printing resolutions. They were referred back to the Committee. Some members are a little tender-hoofed. They are afraid of ghosts. They feel pismires down the small of their backs. They have yearnings and misgivings and cramps under the lower buttons of their vests, for fear somebody's baby will fall out of bed, or that the roaring whangdoodle will come over the mountains and devour the small children. I like to see conscionable men, but a plague on a man who has an inflamed conscience. Some one should eat less water gruel. A little of the bully in a good man, makes him better. Some are so good that they are good for nothing. The Republicans have a caucus tonight, and probably they will make the factious portion of the Democracy haw off the fence, clear the track, and let things be pushed through with vigor. GRACE GREENWOOD lectured here last night to a large audience and a half. "The weak Baptist Church" was as crowded as the Democratic side of Salt River. INVARIABLE.

THE INTERNATIONAL PRIZE FIGHT.—HEENAN has arrived in England, in fine health, and is already at work in preparing himself for the encounter, which will decide the ownership of the champion's belt. Sayers is to start for his training quarters on the 1st of February. He and his friends are surprised and indignant at the story told by Aaron Jones, of his having been drugged or dosed, previous to his last fight with Sayers. The backer of the letter has addressed the following letter to the editor of the N. Y. Clipper:

MR. QUEEN—Sir: Since I wrote to you yesterday, I have had an interview with Sayers, and he says that Jones may be in no fear of not getting a match on with him, and he, the champion, will not let money be any barrier, for Sayers will fight him, Jones, for from one dollar a side to £500 a side; if Aaron Jones does not fight Sayers in a ring, he will have to fight him in a room, or the first time Sayer meets him after his battle—win or lose—with Heenan. There is no sporting man in this country but believes that Jones was beaten on his merits fairly, and they are surprised that he should lay his defeat on being drugged.

Yours, respectfully, J. GIDEON.
London, Jan. 3.

The betting in London was 6 and 7 to 4 on Sayers.

THE STEAM PLOW TRIALS AND THE STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.—Col. Lewis Ellsworth, President of the Illinois Agricultural Society, sends us a copy of an elaborate report made by the Executive Committee, on the Steam Plow trials at Freeport and Chicago, and their action as Awarding Committee of the premiums offered by the State Society.

This report is made in conformity to a recent resolution of the Society. The report recapitulates the incidents of the trial on the 8th of September, when the steam plow "Lancaster" (Fawkes') did a little work under favorable circumstances; of the trial on the 10th, when it totally failed to work; and of the final trial, in this city, on the 15th and 16th of September, when the machine plowed 78 1-2 rods of ground in 31 minutes; 157 rods in 28 1-2 minutes, and 164 rods in 40 minutes. Under these circumstances, the Committee arrive at the conclusion that they were justified in refusing to Mr. Fawkes the premium of $3000 for the best steam engine for plowing and other farm work.—Chi. Dem.

BOUND OVER.—The colored man Carey, arrested for a murderous assault upon Mr. Mollume, was examined before Justice Hinds on Monday. The plea of insanity urged by the prisioner's counsel was not deemed sufficient by the court to justify an acquittal, and he was bound over in the sum of three hundred dollars to appear at the next term of the Circuit Court.—Racine Advocate.

BURGLARY.—On Monday morning the warehouse of Parsons & Co. was entered by burglars, and flour, butter, and other provisions were stolen. A hogshead of molasses was tapped, and about a barrel of it was taken out, and the rascals decamped and let the balance in the cask run all over the floor. The molasses belonged to E. J. Wickham, who was storing it there.—Racine Journal.

A MAN IN OUR STATE, who attempted to hug a beautiful young woman, Miss Lemon, has sued her for striking him in the eye.—Why should a fellow squeeze a Lemon unless he wants a punch?

A Blank List.

BOSTON, Jan. 24th, 1860.

To the Editors of the N. Y. Eve. Post:—The money-making turn of the American people, taking advantage on everything on which a profitable speculation can in any way be made to hinge, was pretty clearly shown in Connecticut, where pikes were sold in great numbers by a humbugging Yankee, who gave out that they were the veritable weapons used in John Brown's foray. But to my mind the neatest speculation yet, is that of a fellow named Gilman, who comes, I believe, from the Old Dominion, under the auspices of the Richmond Enquirer and Obadiah J. Wise. I see that this admirable Gilman is going to publish a book containing the names of those firms whose attachment to slavery extension makes it safe for the southern traders to deal with them, all of which names are doubtless to appear in the New York Herald under the heading of "Great Reaction of Conservative feeling at the North!" For insertion in this volume he charges the modest sum of fifty dollars.

Now, "to me, deeply pondering" on the harmony of this Southern black-mail with the spirit of Mr. O'CONOR and the Fifth Avenue Democrats, occurred the following lines; they are apparently by a poet named Hunt, but whether ex-Governor Hunt or not I cannot say:

About Fifth-Aven, (blackened be his face!)
Dreaming of Harlem bonds, had reached his place
Of business, when within his counting-room,
Making it rich with Bourbon's choice perfume,
He saw an agent, writing in a book
With brazen gleam. Fifth-Aven's utterance shook
As to the F. F. V. he faintly said,
"What writest thou?" The visitor scratched his head,
And shifted the tobacco in his mouth:
"The names of those who truckle to the South."
"And is mine one?" said Abou. "Nary one,"
Replied the gent. Abou paid the money (fifty dollars) saying, "Perthee, then,
"Write me as one that truckles to Aleen."
The agent wrote and vanished; and, next thing,
The Herald came with GREAT AWAKENING!
And showed what firms were safe for Southern trade,
And lo! Fifth-Aven's name was at the head.

HOW GRACE LOOKED IN MADISON.—The editor of the Madison Journal thus describes GRACE GREENWOOD'S appearance:

Height rather below than above the average. Complexion dark. Hair, by gas light, raven black, and wavy, with a natural propensity to curl. Face rather long, with a high, beautifully moulded forehead, and "twin-arched ebon brows." Very large brown or black eyes capable of great power of expression. Nose large, straight, and well formed; cheeks just a little thin; mouth small but the lips a trifle too thin, the least pleasant feature of her face; chin well-developed and indicative of dashing energy of character. Like Halleck's Fanny, Grace was no prettier once than now, her age approximating—if we may venture upon so delicate a subject—forty, though she is by no means destitute of attractions. But we will warrant that twenty years ago, she was a dashing, imperious beauty, the wild light of whose eyes played the deuce with masculine hearts. She was dressed last evening in black silk. An unpleasant lisp mars the effect of her speaking at first but soon ceases to attract attention as the proceeds. We could detect no "strong-minded" indications either in her lecture, dress or manner; but should judge her to be a highly intellectual, accomplished and sensible woman.

CURLING.—The ancient and invigoratng Scottish game of curling on the ice, is becoming very popular in this neighborhood. Wednesday the 25th, being the anniversary of the birthday of Robert Burns, the Scotchmen of Caledonia, Dekorra and Portage, had what is technically termed in curling phraze, "a regular bonspiel," upon the ice at Silver Lake. Early in the forenoon the players from Caledonia and Dekorra, made their appearance on the ice, 12 from Caledonia were set off to play against 12 players from Portage City. The other players arranged themselves promiscuously, in all about fifty players. The ice was good, and the players had an excellent day's sport; 3 p. m. was the hour fixed upon for the game to stop.—When the hour arrived, the 3 Rinks from Caledonia and Portage City stood as follows:

	Portage.	Caledonia.
1 Rink	45 shots.	14 shots.
2 "	35 "	18 "
3 "	14 "	34 "
	84 "	61 "

Portage City ahead 23 shots.—Portage City Record.

SIMPLE STATISTICS.—A party of gentlemen meeting at a Club-house in this city, a few evenings since, turned the conversation on the age of one of those present, when he plead guilty to about seventy years. They went into a calculation as to the number of days, hours, and minutes he had lived, and the amount of whisky and cigars he had consumed, and the result is appended. He had lived 25,550 days, 613,200 hours, and 36,792,000 minutes. Having ascertained that he commenced to smoke and drink at 15 years of age, and that he considered he had averaged two glasses of whisky and two cigars per diem ever since, it was developed that he had used those for 20,575 days, in which he had consumed 40,150 drinks and the same number of cigars, which, allowing 60 drinks to the gallon, gave 668 gallons, or about eleven hogsheads, at 60 gallons to the hhd. The gross cost to him, of liquors and cigars, had been $4,015, which would have purchased about 3,200 acres of land, at the government price of $1 25 per acre; and rather astonished him by the information of the extent to which he had absorbed territory. He took things coolly, however, and fumed and smiled as of yore.—Washington States.

SIR WALTER SCOTT'S hat was always the smallest in any company he happened to be in—the head was pyramidal. Byron's was the same. Sir Charles Napier, in his "Diary," thus mentions his meeting with Byron: "Lord Byron is still here—a very good fellow, very pleasant, always laughing and joking. An American gave a very good account of him in the newspapers, but said that his head was too large in proportion, which is not true. He dined with me the day before we arrived, and four or five of us tried to put on his hat, but none could; he had the smallest head of all, and one of the smallest I ever saw. He is very compassionate and kind to every one in distress." At the opening of Burns' mausoleum in 1834, for the interment of his widow, the poet's skull was taken up and examined. Nine gentlemen were present, and every one tried his hat on the skull. Only one of the nine could cover it, and that was the hat of Mr. Thomas Carlyle.

HOUSE BURNED.—On Wednesday last, the dwelling of Sylvanus Brainard, formerly known as the Belden tavern stand, in the town of Wheatland, Kenosha county, about six miles south of this village, was burned to the ground, with a large portion of its contents. The fire caught from a chimney. Mrs. Brainard came near losing her life, her husband having to carry her by main force from a room that was enveloped in flames. The loss is severe to Mr. Brainard, as all his winter's provisions, and a large portion of his furniture was burned, and there was no insurance. A subscription paper is being circulated for his benefit.—Burlington (Racine Co.) Gazette.

THE ORIGIN OF PIANOS.—The piano-forte, that favorite parlor instrument now considered an almost indispensable article in every family that can purchase it, was invented by J. C. Schroder, of Dresden, in 1717. The square piano was made first by Frederica, an organ builder of Saxony, about 1758. Pianofortes were made in London by M. Zumpio, a German, in 1766. The manufacture of this instrument was commenced in this country since the opening of the present century.

"THE OCTAROON."—This new play was produced for the first time at McVicker's Theatre last evening, and to a good house. It is a very fair representation of plantation life in Louisiana, the Octaroon girl (Miss Kimberly) being the heroine; but it has no "Abolition doctrine" in it that we could discover. The plot is a light one; the first two acts rather insipid; the two middle ones very good; and the last merely tolerable.—Chic. Journal.

A MUSICAL PRODIGY.—The Burlington (Vt.) Free Press publishes an account of a new musical prodigy—a girl three years old, daughter of Andrew Story, Jr., of Essex, Mass.—who plays a dozen tunes on the melodeon, in four parts, in correct time, and imitates by ear. The child has made one public appearance.

PHILADELPHIA LOCOMOTIVES AT THE SOUTH.—The Savannah Express says that during this winter a locomotive builder in Philadelphia has been in the South soliciting orders, and has obtained them to the extent of fifty-six locomotives for southern roads.

A PUBLIC MEETING has been held at Vicksburgh, Mississippi, for the purpose of offering sympathy and aid to the sufferers by the late calamity at Lawrence, Mass.

THE CITY.

Walt Whitman and Skimmilk's Warbles.

We give place to two poetic gems from the pens of two of the most promising young bards in the country. WALT WHITMAN, the author of "Leaves of Grass" can condense more of the mystic, incomprehensible and beautiful in one poem than any author since the time of SPENCER—with the exception of SKIMMILK. There is, of course, much diversity of opinion as to which of the following poems can justly claim superiority.—While we do not wish to make critical comparisons, we proudly point to the effort of our own bard as a flight quite as lofty as was ever achieved by the wonderful WALT WHITMAN.

Persons wishing to communicate with the author will please address him hereafter as the "Poet of the Badger State," or if brevity is desired, as "SKIMMILK WARBLER."

[From the N. Y. Saturday Press.]
YOU AND ME AND TO-DAY.

BY WALT WHITMAN.

I.

With antecedents,
With my fathers and mothers, and the accumulations of past ages,
With all which, had it not been, I would not now be here, as I am,
With Egypt, India, Phœnicia, Greece and Rome,
With the Celt, the Scandinavian, the Alb, and the Saxon,
With antique maritime ventures—with laws, artizan, ships, wars, journeys,
With the poet, the skald, the saga, the myth, and the oracle,
With the sale of slaves—with enthusiasts—with the troubadore, the crusader and the monk,
With these old continents whence we have come to this new continent,
With the fading kingdoms and kings over there,
With the fading religions and priests,
With the small, old, unclean shores we look back to, from our own large and present shores,
With countless years drawing themselves onward, and arrived at these years,
You and Me arrived—America arrived, and making this year,
This year! sending itself ahead countless years to come.

II.

O, but it is not the years—it is I—it is You,
We touch all laws; and tally all antecedents,
We are the skald, the oracle, the monk, and the knight errant—we include them, and more,
We stand amid time, beginningless and endless—we stand amid evil and good,
All swings around us—There is as much darkness as light,
The very sun swings itself and its system of planets around us,
Its sun, and its again, all swing around us.

III.

As for me,
I have the idea of all, and am all, and believe in all.
I believe materialism is true, and spiritualism is true—I reject no part.

IV.

Have I forgotten any part?
Come to me, whoever and whatever, till I give you recognition.

V.

I respect Assyria, China, Teutonia, and the Hebrews,
I adopt each theory, myth, god, and dæmi-god,
I see that the old accounts, bibles, genealogies, are true, without exception,
I assert that all past days were what they should have been,
And that to-day is what it should be—and that America is,
And that to-day and America could no-how be better than they are.

VI.

In the name of These States, and in your and my name—the Past!
And in the name of These States, and in your and my name—the Present!

VII.

I know that the past was great, and the future will be great,
And I know that both curiously conjoint in the present time, in myself and yourself,
And that where I am, or you are, this present day, there is the centre of all days, all races,
And there is the meaning, to us, of all that has ever come of races and days, or ever will come.

THEY AND WE.

BY SKIMMILK.

I.

With Passivity,
With my aunt and her grandmother's squint,
Modicum of intellectuality:
With these, those, over and under, mixed
With all that is, and is'nt,
With ages transpired, transfixed, true
With Boatmen and niggers, and the Colonel,
With other things not here connected,
You and me, and they and us and we and those others:
This, that and 'tother years, and the whole.

II.

Oh, but it has nothing to do with this,
Or anything else.

III.

Nothing is here vivified.
I am nothing!

IV.

I am well acquainted with Tera del Fuego
And the Jews,
But I, me, we can not, O, no no, cannot
Keep a hotel!

V.

We and us.

THE MORTALITY OF NEWSPAPERS and magazines, instead of operating as a discouragement to amateur publishers, appears to serve only as a hone to whet their spirit of adventure. Editing a newspaper, like making a fire, is a matter which every green horn supposes himself able to do a little better than anybody else. Some people have a mania for publishing, and start a newspaper once a year regularly. When the Weekly Luminary "busts up" its proprietor returns to common sense and cold potatoes, until he again rakes together a few hundred dollars. The Literary Chanticleer is his next effort, and makes its appearance with a "prize story," entitled "The Links of Memory; or, the Mysterious Sausage." The Chanticleer crows twice and dies of starvation; when the publisher with a capital of two pistareens and a pair of broken breeches, returns to the trying realities of manual labor, only to repeat the process of starting a newspaper at the earliest possible moment, when the necessary funds are scraped together. The births and mortality of weekly and weakly journals in this country is about one per week, and will continue to be so until newspaper making is recognized as a profession, to be learned like that of law, or tailoring.

VERY SOUND ADVICE.—When you feel your passions rising, never confine or repress them. How many boilers have burst by not close an imprisonment of the contents!

Always proclaim the faults of others.—There should be no secrets in a Republican form of government.

Never give up your opinions, although you know you are wrong—it shows no independence.

When you attack your neighbor's character do it behind his back, so as not to hurt his feelings.

When you have done an act of charity publish it to others so that they may do so too; besides every man can preach best from his own notes.

Never pay your debts, it is unconstitutional, for payment enjoins the obligation of a contract, and even the Legislature has no right to do that.

THE MASQUERADE BALL TO NIGHT!—Don't forget the Masquerade Ball, at the Albany, this evening. It will be one of the most attractive festivals ever given in our city. The proceeds go to aid the German and English Academy in the First Ward—one of the best educational institutions of our city. A great number of quaint and original masques are in preparation for the ball to-night. The price of tickets is very moderate, and the entertainment will be first rate.

POLICE ARRESTS FOR LAST MONTH.—We are indebted to Policeman RODEE, of the Station House, for the following list of arrests for the month of January:—Arson, 1; assault and battery, 27; petty larceny, 17; malicious trespass, 1; swindling, 1; picking pockets, 1; assault with intent to kill, 1; threatening, 1; keeping house of ill fame, 1; inmates, 3; disorderly, 32; drunk, 26; vagrancy, 3; for various other petty offences, 6. Total 115.

HOUSE IN THE SEVENTH WARD.—J. S. FILLMORE has a brick house to rent for eight years. It has furnaces, gas, and all other conveniences.

A NOVELTY FOR SMOKERS.—One of the novelties of the season is the introduction to American tobaccanalians of a Paris invention, designed for the use of smokers. This is a small apparatus for the manufacture of paper cigarettes, by means of which a smoker may make his own cigars, of such tobacco as he chooses. It consists of a small wooden mould, within which is placed a thin paper tube, which is quickly rammed full of tobacco, by means of a little funnel and rammer, inserted at the large end. The cigar is then pushed out complete and ready for smoking. The papers, which are very thin and light, and are colored to resemble common cigars, accompany the apparatus in neat little packages. To those who dislike the strong flavor of clay pipes and bogus meerschaums, as well as the bad tobacco used in the manufactured cigars, the novelty will be acceptable. We do not know whether this novelty has found its way to our city yet, or not. If it has not, it will soon, undoubtedly.

MUNICIPAL COURT, Feb. 1.—Leopold Becker, assault and battery. Fined $20 and costs. Paid.

Joseph Ferrell, drunk and disorderly.—Fined $1 and costs. Execution issued.

Caroline Dionisius and Charles Smith, assault and battery. Settled on payment of costs by the complainant, amounting to $8, 84.

TELEGRAPH!

REPORTED BY THE N. Y. ASSOCIATED PRESS, FOR THE DAILY SENTINEL.

Railroad Accident.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 1—8 P. M.

This morning about 2 o'clock, as the train from Philadelphia reached Susquehanna river, the express, mail and sleeping cars passed as usual on the ferry boat, but from too much headway the express car went over into deep water—the truck falling on the deck of the boat, but doing no damage to her. The passengers in the sleeping car knew nothing of the affair for some time after. It is supposed that the ice on the breaks prevented them from acting properly. The mail car came near going, and the mail agent jumped from the window, but the brakeman promptly disconnected the coupling, and thus saved further disorder. The accident, together with the storm, delayed the arrival of the train here till six o'clock.

An Important Day in Congress!

THE HOUSE ORGANIZED!

A REPUBLICAN SPEAKER ELECTED!!

WASHINGTON, Feb. 1—9 P. M.

HOUSE.—The proceedings were opened with prayer by Rabbi Raphael. It abounded with fervently expressed patriotism and religious sentiments. He implored Divine blessing to direct the House in the election of a Speaker who may preside without favor or fear, and that the members might speak and act for the glory and happiness of their common country. The prayer was listened to with marked attention.

The Clerk having stated that the question pending was the motion of Mr. Sherman, that the House proceed to vote for Speaker, on motion of Mr. Phelps, of Mo., there was a call of the House.

Before the proceedings under the call were completed, Mr. Bocock moved that Mr. Clark of N. Y., be excused for non-attendance. He stated that a number of gentlemen were absent, and that his motive in moving the motion was to give them time to arrive.

Several short explanations of their votes were made by Messrs. Clark, of Mo., Cobb, Keitt, Smith, of Va., and Barksdale; the last maintaining that if the South-Americans concentrated with the Democrats on Mr. McClernand they could defeat Mr. Pennington.

Two More Teachers Expelled Without Cause Shown.

The New York Evening Post contains an account of the expulsion from the Williamsburg District in South Carolina of Messrs. DODD and HAMILTON, who had resided about a year in Kingstree, S. C., as school teachers. They were (falsely, as usual,) charged with "Abolitionism, and anonymous letters, signed "Many Citizens," and threatening tar and feathers if they did not leave the State, were sent to them. Two public meetings were also held to denounce them. In the meantime Mr. DODD and Mr. HAMILTON continued to teach school, having committed no act whatever which should provoke or justify suspicion. The feeling, however, against them increased, and another meeting was called, at which a long string of resolutions were reported and adopted. The last resolution was as follows:

Resolved, That this meeting will adopt no further hostile or coercive measures for the removal of W. J. DODD and R. A. HAMILTON, at present, but that out of respect for the persons in whose employ they have been, they be permitted to remain until their respective terms of employment are terminated; to wit: Hamilton's on the 1st day of December proximo, and Dodd's on the 10th of said month, at which they shall leave the District, even at the risk of battle.

The whole Williamsburg District of South Carolina being thus in an uproar, and "civil war" and "battle" talked of, Mr. DODD became disgusted and came home—Mr. HAMILTON taking the same course—not, however, until he was quite ready, choosing his own time, and without suffering violence, like many less fortunate northerners.

Before the gentlemen left South Carolina, several communications appeared in the Charleston Mercury, signed by the most respectable men in Kingstree and its neighborhood, totally exculpating Mr. DODD from all charges made against him. Mr. DODD and Mr. HAMILTON have come to the conclusion to remain in Jersey City, where they now are.

Contemptible Business.

The Southern Confederacy, published at Atlanta, Georgia, has a leading article entitled "White and Black Lists," in which it denounces certain parties named in what it calls its Black Lists, as Republicans, incendiaries, and enemies of the South, whom no Southern man should deal with; and it avows its purpose to dog and watch the traders of Georgia, and Atlanta especially, for the purpose of ascertaining whether any of them dare to have any business intercourse with any firm included its "Black List."—The character of the movement will be seen in the following paragraphs from the Confederacy:

"We are posted upon the Black horses as well as the White boxers. And if we know any merchant receiving goods without the stencil mark of the concern from which he buys, we shall then announce the trick and the merchant. The people of Georgia are compelled to act in the matter, and let us commence with that most potent of all interests, the mercantile interest.

The names of houses found under the BLACK LIST, we know are steeped and saturated in Sewardism, Brownism, Lovejoyism, Helperism, and Abolitionism. If they are not, let them deny it under oath before the world, and say who they supported for President in 1856.

Those found in the White List are sound Constitutional houses, and a majority of whom are Southern born and Southern raised, and are yet interested in the institutions of the South. It is of these men that the merchants of Georgia and the South should buy their goods. Public sentiment, as well as their duty as good and loyal citizens of a slave-holding community, will prompt them to this act."

This sort of espionage is infinitely contemptible and merits the scorn of the American people. Even the Doughface journals denounce these "Black Lists" and the mercenary motives of those who get them up.—The N. Y. Journal of Commerce says:

"Not only is great injustice done to some Northern houses, through personal ill-will, or envy, or malice, on the part of its rivals, as suggested by "A. B.," but there are certain persons, not to say newspapers, among us, that are speculating upon the state of excitement at the South by resorting to Black Mail. The method is this—Quill calls upon a mercantile house which is "right on the Dred Scott question," and tells them that he is making up a list of houses, who are friendly to the South, that he may publish their names in his paper, for the better assurance of his Southern subscribers. For $20 he will publish the name of the House in the favored list. If the $50 is forthcoming, the name is published, as agreed on. But if the House has too much self-respect, or too much contempt for such impostures, to pay the $50 then let them look out for a place in the Black List. Their friendship to the South turns, in the judgment of Quill, upon the question whether they have $50 to give him or not. If they have, they are good Union men, loyal to the wool, and ready to sustain the rights of the South at all hazards. But if they have no money to spare for Black Mail purposes, then they are Black Republicans beyond a doubt!

A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.—Mr. DOUGLAS, in his recent speech, embodying a bid for the Presidential nomination at Charleston, charged the responsibility of JOHN BROWN's raid at Harper's Ferry upon the Republican party. The Rochester Union, an able and candid Democratic paper, thus protests against this false accusation:

"There is one feature of Senator Douglas' speech which seems to be uncalled for, if not really mischievous in its effects. We refer to holding a great political party directly responsible for the Harper's Ferry "war." That proposition cannot be maintained by argument; and the imputation is well calculated to aggravate the morbid excitement of the Southern mind, which every good man should exert himself to allay."

Consistency and Humanity of Modern Democracy.

Some months since Miss Sarah P. Remond, a intelligent and educated colored woman, a citizen of Massachusetts, visited England with the following passport from our venerable Secretary of State, dated, it will be seen, since the Dred Scott decision:

PASSPORT.—I, the undersigned, Secretary of State of the United States of America, hereby request all whom it may concern, to permit safely and freely to pass Sarah P. Remond, a citizen of the United States, and in case of need to give her all lawful aid and protection.

Given under my hand and the Impression of my seal of the Department of State of the City of Washington, the 10th day of September, A. D. 1858, in the 83d year of the Independence of these United States.

Department of State. LEWIS CASS.

Desiring to visit France also, Miss Remond applied to the American Legation at London, to have this passport vised. She received a positive refusal, Mr. Dallas giving as a reason, that she was not a citizen of the United States, and that it is an impossibility by law for her to become one, though his principal had certified that she was one. So Miss R. was not permitted to visit France, and has been subject to many other annoyances and outrages in consequence of the refusal. This is American justice and humanity, as expounded by an imbecile, slave-worshipping United States Court! Such is "the only Republican government on the face of the earth," under the rule of an aristocracy of slave-holders and their Northern dependants. —Detroit Advertiser.

HERE is a fact worth knowing, if true. WM. C. MORGAN, of Warren county, Indiana, writes that seed from the butt end of an ear of corn will ripen its product all at the same time, and some three weeks earlier than seed from the little end of the same ear. He recommends farmers always to break their seed corn in two in the middle, and use the butt ends only for seed.

A FRIEND that you have to buy won't be worth what you have to pay for him—no matter how little that may be.

The Judicial Election and "State Rights" Again.

For the Sentinel.

The correctness of my statement concerning the German Republican men of the State is questioned by a correspondent of the Sentinel. My attention has just been called to his article in last Friday's paper. He demands "the name of the German Republican newspaper that takes ground against" the so-called doctrine of "State Rights."

I referred to the Wisconsin Demokrat, published at Manitowoc, by CHARLES RESER.—That paper, I am confident, distinctly declared itself against the doctrine in question a year ago. It has always claimed to be a Republican paper, and it now claims to be one. I am aware that it did not support the entire State ticket last fall; but its defection was from objections to men, not to the principles of the Republican party as authoritatively promulgated in its platform. And those who read that paper, or who know its editor, know it is one of the most radically anti-Slavery of Republican newspapers.

It is precisely because it is hostile to Slavery, if I understand its position, that it opposes this construction of the Federal Constitution, which places an absolute veto in the hands of every State, so far as that State is concerned, upon any law of the United States. I understand it to hold that even if the Federal Constitution were fairly susceptible of this construction, it is a piece of inconceivable short-sightedness for the Republican party, struggling for the possession of the Federal Government, to contend for a construction that strips that Government of all power for good as well as ill, that would deprive success of nearly all its advantages; reduce the Union to a mere confederacy, and concede to every Southern State the right of re-opening the Slave trade and of disregarding every enactment of Congress that the jealousy and prejudiced sensitiveness of a Slaveholding population might fancy inconsistent with their "State Rights."

There are a great many who, in their just indignation at the Fugitive Act, have, without looking to ulterior consequences, accepted "State Rights" as a good weapon to fight it with, temporarily; but who, when they reflect upon the subject and see that that weapon is a two-edged sword, with its sharpest edge striking at the very heart of Freedom as well as of the Union, will coincide with the views of Mr. RESER.

Your correspondent tells me that this question has been "settled" by a vote of the people. No question is settled until it is settled right. So the Fugitive Act was "settled" by electing FRANK PIERCE in 1852. But the Republican party say it was not settled right. They have appealed to the country for a rehearing, and they are bound to have that old "settlement" torn up, and the decision reversed. So now many as true Republicans as breathe, appeal to the honest conscientious masses of the party in this State to review their former decision and see whether, upon the eve of an expected national triumph, they wish to adopt a construction of the Constitution which deprives the Federal Government of powers which, in their hands, would be used for the protection of Freedom and not of Slavery.

With the battery already half taken—with the enemy flying from the remainder, and the whole, as we confidently believe, about to fall into our hands—at such a juncture shall we begin spiking the guns? Rather, let us keep every gun in good working order and turn it upon the foe!

The question raised by Judge DIXON's opinion is not precisely like that tried before. It, in fact, has no more to do with the Fugitive Act than with any other act of Congress. It is, as I have before stated, whether the Supreme Court of the United States is the final Court of resort in cases arising under the laws of the United States, or whether there are as many Courts of final resort in such cases as there are States in the Union.

Judge DIXON holds the former view. I am no stickler for Judge DIXON's re-election. I only ask that he shall not be set aside because of this opinion. Nothing in the State or National Platform of our party indicates that such an opinion is anti-Republican.—Yet the Platform adopted by our late State Convention expressly declares that the State Platform of 1854 and the National Platform of 1856 are ample for the security of the reserved rights of the States. Is it wise to seek to exclude men from the party upon a test not found in either of those Platforms?

I cannot better express my views upon the subject of the Judicial election than by adopting the following extract from a recent editorial in the Beaver Dam Citizen, an ably conducted Republican newspaper:

We are not of those who believe that Judge DIXON's recent opinion was given as a bid for party independent nomination. Viewing the question strictly in a legal sense, it seems to us that he expressed the convictions to which he was forced by the process of reasoning he adopted. That he has committed himself in favor of the Fugitive Slave Law is not true, but simply in favor of the right of the U. S. Supreme Court to decide on the constitutionality of Congressional enactments, in appellate jurisdiction over the State Courts. The sentiment on both sides of this question is of course fallacious, and men of differently constituted minds will view the question in different lights. We simply say that Judge DIXON in his opinion coincides with many eminent jurists in other States, of known Republican sympathies. Is it necessary, then, to force at issue on the question at this time? Will it not be wiser to direct the action of the State Convention which will assemble next month, towards conciliation and strength? There are objections against A. D. Smith, which were serious a year since and are equally so now. We trust that a harmonious course may be adopted, and the right man brought forward for our support.

It would be much better, it seems to me, for the party to adopt a policy like this, tolerating a diversity of sentiment upon the question of the jurisdiction of Federal and State Courts, as upon the tariff and other questions, than to proclaim to the world that no man is entitled to the confidence of the Republican party of Wisconsin who does not hold that the Supreme Court of the State is the final judge of the laws of the United States. REPUBLICAN.

Queer Doings at Madison.

For the Sentinel.

FOND DU LAC, Jan. 30, 1860.

ED. SENTINEL.—By what hocus pocus has our Supreme Court been leading off the people on the question as to who shall fill the Bench of that Court?

They decide City Bonds good one day and City Bonds bad on another—set one man up and another man down—they have not been content with unmaking one Governor and making another, but I observe in your report of their doings in to-day's paper that they have actually admitted Mr. P. L. SPOONER, as a member of that Court!

Can it be possible that Justices COLE and PAINE have got a pry under its Chief Justice and admitted SPOONER to his place—or has the whole Court entered into a conspiracy to defraud the people of their voice and made a compromise by adding a fourth man!

This is a grave question for consideration, and inasmuch as the Legislature is in session wouldn't it be well to have a committee of investigation—say FRED. HORN as chairman—with leave to associate some double-headed man outside that the thing may be done up Brown. Yours for the people,

JOHN.

WESTERN LAKE VESSELS AT CONSTANTINOPLE.—A correspondent of the Philadelphia Bulletin, writing from Constantinople, says:

Another fact, which has interested not a little your countrymen out here, is that four or five American vessels have been recently in port, all from Cleveland, Ohio. But judge of our greater astonishment, on walking into our consulate the other day, to see the ship's papers of an American captain all the way from Chicago! We hardly believed our eyes.

OLD FASHIONS TO BE REVIVED.—A writer in the Richmond Whig appeals to the ladies of Virginia as follows:

"Show to the North that you will clothe yourselves at home, and that, if need be, you will sooner resort to the primeval garment of fig leaves, than to purchase a farthing's worth from a Northern House, or from the merchant of Richmond who does so purchase."

What an ungallant fellow to urge all the ladies to take their leaves.—Madison Jour.

MOST articles fluctuate in value; but it has been generally observed that pen, ink and paper is always stationary.

Douglas and Fessenden in the Senate.

Correspondence of the N. Y. Tribune.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29, 1860.

There have been rare attractions in both wings of the Capitol to-day. It being understood that Douglas was to make a bid for Southern support at Charleston, under the guise of a speech on this proposed measure for protecting the Slaveholding States against invasion, the galleries of the Senate were crowded at an early hour. At the outset, the counter attraction in the House consisted only of a ranting speech from Barksdale, on the jejune topics of Helper, Dred Scott, Old Brown, and a Dissolution of the Union. At a later hour Corwin took the floor, when there was a speedy diminution in the number of those who witnessed the performance of the whilome Anti-Lecompton Senator.

Douglas' speech was but a rehash of his old ideas about the necessity of a diversity of domestic institutions in the several States of the Union, interlarded with a spacious argument in favor of legislation to prevent the inhabitants of one State conspiring to overthrow the institutions of another, garnished with charges against the Republican party, alike false and indecent, as the authors of Brown's invasion of Virginia. The effort hardly rose to the level of the Senator's ordinary forensic displays, both in matter and manner. Without one original idea to redeem it from the common current of partisan platitudes, it was wholly lacking in that defiant spirit and seeming sincerity which inspired and vivified his speeches of two years ago. The difference in his bearing toward the Republican side of the Chamber, between now and then, was equally marked. He was to-day the same specious betrayer of Freedom that he was when he forced through the Kansas-Nebraska bill, six years ago. He was putting in his proposals for the Charleston nomination, and he seemed not inclined to stint the measure of his degradation, but to sink to the level of the exigency.

Mr. Fessenden replied to Douglas with extraordinary pungency and power. Some of his points pierced the joints of his armor, and touched the quick, causing him to writhe upon the trenchant weapon of the Republican Senator. For example: Fessenden expressed surprise that Douglas, in his project of a law to break up conspiracies against the Government, had made no provision for the threatened contingency of an attempt to overturn the Constitution in the event of an election, by legal means, of a Republican President. Douglas was imprudent enough to reply that the utter absurdity of supposing that any candidate of that party could be elected, made it wholly unnecessary to guard against the consequences of such an impossible event. Like a flash of lightning, Fessenden seathed him with the retort that the earnestness with which masses of men, fully equal to the Senator in capacity to judge of probabilities, predicted that event, and threatened to thwart it by disunion, would seem to imply that he was in error, and over sanguine in regard to this part of the pending Presidential programme, as he might also be in regard to the part which he himself was destined to play in that programme. The hit was so palpable, and the blow dealt with such provoking coolness, that Douglas lost his temper, and tried to be severe in his reply, but was only abusive, showing that the arrow had reached a vital part and stuck fast.

It is not believed that Douglas has improved his chances for a nomination by this raid on the free spirit of the country. His only hope was in maintaining a lofty position of independence. He never won anything except by imperiousness of will. Clinging to the South, which he has once betrayed, is not the way to capture the Charleston Convention. Backed by a defiant North, he might break into it. He will never be suffered to creep in. If he ever enters its doors, it will be an erect posture. He will not be allowed to crawl over its threshold. While he stood up, manfully and defiantly, the South feared him. Now that he has fallen upon his knees, they will spurn and reject him.

HURRAH! HURRAH! HURRAH!

Grand Rapids Against the World!—Salt! Salt!! Salt!!!—The Salt has Found its Savior!—The Strongest Brine Known!—The Democratic Republican Presidential and Grand Rapids Salt!

Our city is all alive with excitement today, from the fact, just tested, that our salt springs furnish the strongest brine yet found in any springs in the world. The Grand River Salt Company have to-day brought out of their well, at a depth of 186 feet, a quantity of water, which the tester shows to be one quarter salt—that is, of a strength to yield a bushel of salt from thirty-two gallons! Mr. Ira S. Farrand, who superintends the boring at this well, has had much experience at the Syracuse saline district.—He informs us that the best springs there have yielded, when first tapped, only a bushel to 44 gallons, and from that they gradually weaken to 60 or 70, when they are for a time abandoned and suffered to re-gather strength. Those springs are noted as the strongest which are worked. If the vein struck to-day be not a mere "pocket," and hence liable to be quickly exhausted, we bear the palm from the Syracusens, and every lodp else, with a large per centage to spare.

Messrs. Dr. Leonard, Wm. T. Powers and Henry Martin are the gentlemen composing the Grand River Salt Company. Their well is located on the west bank of the river, a short distance from the Leonard Street bridge. From present appearances, they may congratulate themselves upon the prospect that they have opened a mine of prospective wealth, to this city and valley as well as themselves.—Grand Rapids Eagle, January 28th.

The Germans of Detroit Preparing for the Campaign of 1860.

Several hundred Republican Germans met pursuant to adjournment, at Bolynk's Hall, on Saturday evening, to hear the reports of the Committees on a Platform, Constitution, &c., and to organize for the coming Presidential campaign.

The draft of the Constitution presented by the Committee, set forth—

1st. That the Germans of a liberal opinion organize under the name of "The German Republican Association."

2d. That the platform of Philadelphia, with additions, is that of this Association.

3d. That every one who signs the Constitution, can become a member of the Association.

The 4th section referred to the dues to be paid.

5th. The officers of the Association shall be a President, Vice-President, Treasurer, Corresponding Secretary, Recording Secretary, and an Executive Committee composed of five.

6th. The Ward Committee shall be composed of three members each.

The remaining sections provide for the election of officers, the length of their terms, the meetings of the Association, changes of the constitution, and the term for which the organization shall continue.

The Constitution was adopted with the following additions to the platform:

That slavery shall be restricted within the narrowest limits possible.

That the Association will act with the Republican party, if the latter protects the adopted citizen in his rights, and pledges itself to do its utmost for the abolishment of the Massachusetts Foreign Law.

That the Association is in favor of a Homestead Law—every actual settler being entitled to a piece of land.

In favor of a better protection to home industry.

In favor of an energetic protection of American citizens in foreign countries.

That in case the Association assists the Republican party, it expects the party to nominate a candidate for President with liberal ideas, and that the first choice of the Association is Wm. H. Seward.

The following officers were then elected:
President—J. G. Peterson.
Vice-President—M. Darmstaetter.
Treasurer—Leonhardt Richter.
Corresponding Secretary—Fred. Miller.
Recording Secretary—C. Marxhausen.
Executive Committee—L. Jansen, John Bloyuk, Charles Busch, B. Mauch, Dr. E. E. Scheerer.

A number of speeches were made, and the meeting was a very enthusiastic and harmonious one.—Detroit Advertiser.

CONDITION OF THE ILLINOIS BANKS.—The Illinois State Journal publishes a detailed statement of the capital, circulation, &c., of the banks of that State, summing up as follows:

It will be seen, by the above, that the outstanding circulation amounts to $8,981,728, and is based upon an aggregate of State and other stock securities to the amount of $9,825,244 61. This stock shows shows an excess of securities of $843,521 61, and it is said, by those familiar with the subject, that they are among the best in the market. In order that our readers may see how the stocks are divided, we subjoin a statement made up a short time ago, and believed to be substantially correct:

Missouri 6's	$3,871,000	U. S. 5's	$426,000 00
Tennessee 6's	1,000,000	Illinois 6's '62, '70,000 00

Iowa 5's	91,000	Ill. and Mich.
Minnesota 8's	150,000	Canal Bonds,	356,416 00
Michigan 5's	50,000	Ohio 6's	241,000 00
Michigan 6's	570,000

We find by referring to the Auditor's report that the outstanding circulation of the Banks on the 1st of December, 1858, amounted to $6,205,122. This was secured by a deposit of stocks to the amount of $7,124,641 79, the market value of which, at that date, was $6,740,745 95—showing the excess of securities to be $535,623 95.

EXPERIMENTS WITH SPECIFIC MANURES.—A few years since Mr. Main gave the results of his experiments on this subject in the "Transactions of the Highland Society of Scotland." He made careful investigation into the effect of various manures on nearly all the cultivated crops, and found that each required particular ingredients, without which they could not be raised in perfection. He also found that if a soil does not contain what is essential to the growth of a plant, it must be supplied by the one or the other of the specific manures, and that the substance necessary to be applied to the soil may be discovered by consulting the nature, properties and composition of the plants to be raised. Nitrate and ammonical substances excel in the production of straw, grass, potatoes and turnip tops, without an equivalent production of grain or bulbs; so these substances should not be applied alone, but in connection with others containing phosphates. This is illustrated by the fact that saltpetre refuse, and nitrate of soda, applied with guano or prepared night soil and animal charcoal, improve their individual production either in quality or in weight, or in both.

Salts which are sulphates, produce grain in larger proportion to their straw than other salts which are nitrates or ammoniacal.—Bones, though dissolved in sulphuric acid, may be greatly enhanced in value by the addition of ammoniacal substances; hence it is inferred that substances which are capable of imparting additional luxuriance to the foliage of plants should be combined with phosphates, which tend to increase the size of the bulb or grain. Sulphuric acid is eminently beneficial to the potato crop; as recorded in Mr. Main's tables, it proved a preventive of the disease called "curl," having produced a healthy crop, when, from the same seed, and although treated in the same manner, the other plants of the field were much infected with that disease.

Farm yard manure and guano combined, in the proportion of about 15 tons of the former to about 3 cwt. of the latter, has an extraordinary effect in producing luxuriant crops of potatoes, turnips, &c. Gypsum contains so much lime and sulphuric acid that it is an excellent manure for potatoes, and should be liberally applied in the cultivation of this crop. As its effects are much more permanent than guano, it should be used in preference to that manure.

Gypsum is much used in Europe for fixing the ammonia which evaporates from stables and manure heaps; by this means its value is greatly increased, and it becomes a very powerful fertilizer. Gypsum being one of the staple productions of Michigan, and valuable for almost every kind of crop, should be used by every farmer in the State. By this means agricultural products might be nearly doubled.

DARK STABLES.—It cannot be doubted that light exercises a very important influence upon animal as well as upon vegetable economy. Every one's feelings bear witness to the stimulus afforded by its agency; a dark day or a dark room induces lassitude and repose, which is quickly dissipated by the bright sunshine. Many diseases are much more virulent in shaded situations, and the eye especially cannot long retain its full power if deprived of light. From mistaken notions on this subject, or from false economy, it is a general practice to exclude light from the stables of horses and other animals. It is supposed by many that they will thrive best in the dark. Where the animal is stabled for a brief period of rest, darkness will undoubtedly favor his repose. In the season when flies are troublesome it also may be well to darken the stable to exclude them, but when the animals are stabled permanently in darkness, they cannot but suffer in various ways. The horse, especially, is very much subject to diseases of the eye, and there can be but little doubt that this tendency is increased by confining him permanently where the eye, in waking hours, is strained to an undatural position to perceive objects around him.

Horse jockeys find an advantage in the use of such stables. The animal being brought into the glare of day is confused and startled and by his high stepping and half uncertain manner, impresses a novice with an idea of his spirit and action. Even if the quiet induced by darkness may favor increase of fat, it is not conducive of muscular strength. Muscles deprived of the stimulus of light become flaccid, and the apparently high condition induced by this means, is soon lost by active exertion. Men whose employments confine them to poorly lighted apartments, soon lose the color and the energy of full health, and the same results follow similar treatment of animals.

Besides this, a dark stable will seldom be kept in that cleanly condition which favors full health. The "corners" will be neglected, especially if the care of animals be entrusted to the "help," who are usually content if the stables look nice. When building stables, ample provision for light will cost but little more than imperfect fixtures, and in the end will be found more profitable.—Maine Farmer.

SCROFULA IN SWINE.—The American Stock Journal comes to us with a very able article on scrofula in swine, from the pen of Dr. DODD. In speaking of the causes of this disease he says:

The conditions favorable for this malady, in its latent form, are brought about by allowing the parents to give birth at the cold season of the year, so that the stormy days of winter set in just about the time when weaning takes place; this, together with insufficient shelter, and the substitution of improper or indigestible food for the parent's milk: the latter being capable of easy absorbtion, while the former requires a certain amount of vital force for its digestion, an energy which the young creature does not always possess.

The early period at which young females are put to the males, is also operative in developing latent maladies and in transmitting and augmenting hereditary affections. In short, whatever has the power of impairing the integrity of the organism, tends also to hasten the appearance of any disease to which the subject may be predispesed.

And prescribes the following:

TREATMENT OF SCROFULA VULGARIS.—The first object is to have the body of the patient properly cleansed with soap suds and water, this to be done at least twice, weekly; and when the skin becomes perfectly dry, let it be anointed with a portion of the following: take of glycerine 4 ounces; hydriodate of potass 4 drachms; water one quart.—Dissolve the potass in the water, then add the glycerine.

In bad cases the animal should have, daily, five grains of potass: this may be dissolved in a small quantity of water, to which a little bran or shorts may be added; put up in this way the animal will not refuse to partake of it. It is best to offer the medicine early in the morning, ere the stomach becomes loaded with the ordinary meal.

Prevention, however, is cheaper than the cure; therefore we should reject, for breeding purposes, all animals known to have the least predisposition to this form of disease.—A simple cross, with a healthy animal of another breed, often suffices to remedy the evil.

THE UNION.

Across the crested billows of the ocean
Storms come and go;
The rolling waves are heaped in high commotion;
The depths are calm below.

What though the broken billows none may number,
What though the tides
Heave like a bosom in unquiet slumber,
Far down, the calm abides.

The sea is one the crested billows under,
Though winds may roar,
Storms rise, and gathering surges break in thunder
Along a wreck-strown shore.

Would'st save the Union! Look upon the ocean,
By storms oppressed;
The wrath of the tempest driven in commotion,
Across its peaceful breast,

And yet it sleeps, though storms and tempests over
Above it sweep;
And the blind rage of winds and waves may never
Disturb its quiet sleep.

A noble rest! Its great heart never throbbing,
In wild alarm;
Though o'er its breast in fitful tonests sobbing
The spirit of the storm.

TWENTY STEPS TO ONE WOMAN'S HEART.

Hartington made himself conspicuous by his flashes of eloquence, growing enthusiastic over bits of landscape, and rapturous over his own wit—throwing in a great deal of the flattery of familiarity—and managing to usurp Blanche's ejaculations, and give every one else to understand they were addressed to him personally. He rode by her side somewhat in advance of the party, and I did not get an opportunity to speak to Blanche until we had arrived at a change in the route, and then it was merely to address some casual and common remark, but I fancied she took pains to prolong a conversation—I say I fancied so, for the senses of the body become acute as the soul and inner perceptions are intensified in this state—and I also fancied that Hartington noticed the same thing.—However, there was little said, and I fell back to the side of Bell. Had I been in a sane or healthy condition, I would not have failed to appreciate the clever Miss Northeral properly; as it was, I did not do her justice. After a long and toilsome ride, which was not shortened any by Jerry's taking us some five miles out of the way—and only getting back on the direct road through the directions of a laboring man in a field—we reached Waring Hill.

At its base we dismounted and the horses were given in charge of a man until our return. There was some confusion, a great many orders were issued, a great deal of arraying of attires, and a great many proposals of how to proceed, and in the midst of all—I lost sight of Bell. There was another party on the spot, and in the bustle, I could not find her immediately. As Jerry was disputing with the ostler at some distance, and several of the number had already begun the ascent, I leisurely proceeded up the hill alone. I had not gone far before I met two of the gentlemen who had accompanied us, with their ladies and Blanche. I looked about for Hartington. Blanche understood the expression instantly, and pointed with her finger down the pathway to where that individual stood—until now, obscured by the bushes—apparently holding an interesting conversation with my former partner, Bell.

"My gallant evidently thinks I shall be able to ascend this mountain by virtue of some inherent upward tendency, and so he helps those with greater gravity," said Blanche.

I had not the wit to understand the arrangement of Jerry just then. But we moved on up the steep acclivity, laughingly conversing, and shortly afterwards our companions disappeared. I acknowledge that a sort of reckless impulse prompted me to an independent haste—an apprehension that Hartington would overtake me—made me assist my friend over the rocks and chasms rather expeditiously.

The pure mountain air, and the exercise quickened our animal spirits, no doubt, and we went on and on with an elasticity, quite astonishing to me once since when I undertook to climb a hill not half as acute.

I had time to make a few startling propositions to myself, however, such as 'can it be possible Blanche prefers my companionship—it certainly looks so—she is running away from the Palm Leaf; she gives me her hand as carelessly as though I were her brother, and seems to have no idea that every touch of the warm fingers sends the blood dancing back to my heart in a wild magnetic torrent; she laughs more heartily, certainly, at my wit, than I have heard her at Hartington's; ye gods! can it be possible there is then the smallest preference, which needs only fanning, fanning—fanning! On we went, like two children, filled with the enthusiasm of youth, bounding over great mossy rocks, brushing through shady thickets, and joining our hands for a leap over crevices and gullies. I wish your camera had caught but one impress of that face, as I saw it when we reached a great flat eminence high up the mountain, and waved our handkerchiefs to the diminished figures below.—The flush of awakened health mantling her cheeks, and the magnificent eyes lit with an extra fire. I shall never forget the 'arm sweep superb' with which she recognized the transcendant beauties of the wide landscape, mapped out for many a mile beneath. This was the second time we had been thrown together under peculiar external circumstances; on both occasions, our impressions had been those of delight; and I was sufficiently discerning to know there was a sympathetic chord that was touched simultaneously in both our beings.

"This fully repays one for the labor of climbing," she said. "How appropriate in the Greeks to locate both the home of their Gods and the goal of their poets on a mountain. See the Hudson, like a 'crescent moon' at the foot of the Catskills, and the Saconadga, and the lakes. What say you, youth, have you no burst of rapture for the picture?"

"I can only say, Miss Therber, with two distinguished men who once climbed a mountain, that 'I feel it is good to be here, and would that I could build a tabernacle and never go down.'"

"Well, I confess your methodical enthusiasm exceeds mine. I fancy it would be somewhat dull."

"Excuse me, not under the present circumstances."

"See, there are the little waters of Ballston and Saratoga, starred with sails; and the Kayaderasseras with its patch-work of husbandry on either bank."

"Yes, and if I am not mistaken, those are the Green Mountains of Vermont ridging the horizon with their pale blue."

Perhaps a finer view cannot be obtained anywhere than from the heights of Waring Hill. There are seen at one glance the towns of Schenectady, Saratoga, Waterford, Schuylerville, and Ballston, spread out in dainty contrast on the green lap of earth, bounded by the gorges of the eastern mountains, and wreathed with the silver of innumerable twining streams. To a mind already feverish, this airy intoxication was well nigh maddening. As Blanche stood by my side looking out over the little world below—so close that a tress of her luxuriant black hair, floated against my cheek—I encountered for the first time, the wild tumult of internal emotions, that paroxysm of love and hope which is always new and unmanageable. I had almost opened my lips to frame my impetuous feelings in words, when we heard the laughing voices of an approaching couple. She started like a frightened school girl, and then with an impulsive bound and a blush on her cheek, said—

"Come, they must not reach the summit before us!"

As we sprung up the path to another lookout, revealing a new picture, I saw Hartington below us, not a dozen yards off; and I heard him call Blanche by name. Just as he did so, she turned her head, although she had not seen or heard him, and again started off, I following. Imagine our surprise, when we reached the summit, to find all the party, with the exception of Hartington, assembled on a rock, where were spread the viands and bottles.

"Better late than never," remarked one of the brilliant young men.

"Ascended the hill spirally, I suppose," said Jerry; "could'nt overcome the mutual attraction."

Blanche, I noticed, blushed, and I exulted over the lapse of time with a lover's glee; for from it I reasoned of a mutual satisfaction, which must have blinded her as well as myself, to its passage.

"Hartington vowed you were lost, and was appointed an investigating committee by the party, every one voting aye, except the two who were absent, and of course it would have been folly to expect their concurrence, even had they been here."

Oats, bus	1,274	Butter, lbs	530
Rye, bus	90	Sundries, lbs	8,262
Barley, bus	20	Dressed hogs, No...	52

There was not much done in the produce market to-day. Wheat continues very dull, scarcely any buyers offering outside of 95c for No. 1 Spring on the track.—The transactions were confined to a few car loads at 95@96c for No. 1; $1,00 for Club; and $1,06@$1,07 for Extra. No sales of flour, the present demand being only for local business. Some good country Extra were offered at $4,50@4,62. Oats were unchanged, sellers holding at 34@35c for small lots delivered. There was some enquiry for shelled corn at 55c. Holders in some instances asked 56@57c. Nothing done in barley.—Rye firm at 86@86c. Grass seed continues firm, and sellers will not listen to any offers short of $2,75 for good Timothy. Sales of 200 bus of an inferior quality are reported at $2,25@2,45. A few small lots of heavy dressed hogs sold at $6,12@6,25.

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—Receipts, flour 360 bbls; wheat 7119 bush; corn 18463 bush; oats 5417 bush; rye 558 bush; barley 195 bush.

The receipts of hogs, live and dressed, to-day amounted to 547, and the market was buoyant. Dressed Hogs were sold freely at 6@6,60, and live hogs at 4,67@5,40 an advance of 10@10c.

The Provision market is firm but inactive. There is very little new pork offering with an active inquiry at $16—holders being firm at $16,50. Cut Meats are also are also scarce and firm. Several thousand pieces Bulk Meats were sold at 6 and 6c loose, and 6 and 6¼c packed—the latter for delivery in 20 to 30 days. Lard is in good demand at 10c, at which 250 bbls were sold to-day—holders at the close being firm at 10¾c.

The flour market was dull, and the sales were limited at 4,60@4,85 for fair to good spring extras, and 6,20 for choice winter wheat extra. Wheat was quiet but firm, and but little changed hands at 87c for No. 2 Spring in store, and 91c for No. 1 Spring in store.—Corn was in better demand, and owing to light receipts an improvement of ½c took place—sales of No. 1 in store at 44@44½c; No. 2 at 44@45c; and Rejected at 41½@42c. Oats in fair demand and steady at 30c in store, and 30½c in bags. Rye firm at 83@84c. Barley quiet. Seeds rather dull, with but limited inquiry and small sales at $2,20@2,30 for Timothy, and $4,25@4,30 for Clover. Highwines ½c lower—sales at 20c.—Press & Tribune.

JUNIUS JUDSON,

PATENTEE AND MANUFACTURER OF

JUDSON'S PATENT

GOVERNOR VALVES,

FOR REGULATING THE

MOTION OF STEAM ENGINES,

WARRANTED THE MOST PERFECT Governor of Steam Power in the world, and like all really great inventions, the most simple. Manufactured by Nelson & Emery, 24 Exchange st., Rochester, N. Y., Selye Buildings, near R. R. Depot.

☞ Shop lights for sale.

CAUTION TO INFRINGERS.

Patent issued in the United States, Nov. 5th, 1858. Reissued, Jan. 4th, 1859. Second Patent, March 4th, 1851. Patented also in Great Britain and the Canadas, January 4th, 1851.

This improvement consists in making regulating valves or gates for the purpose of governing speed, by increasing the width of the opening made in the valve—or by accelerating the opening motion of the valve—or by combining both—or by combining increased width of opening, with accelerated valve motion. My patent Valves and Governors are so arranged as to give the greatest power to the piston (regardless of the load of the engine,) the power to open the valve just the exact instant of quantity necessary to counteract the least variance and from the aperture, by the addition of equal amounts of resistance, notwithstanding the great increase of speed of the engine by decreasing in its effects.

Therefore reverse the action of valves combined with governors as hereto used. And as this effect can be produced by many different mechanical devices, (apparently not original,) by which infringers have imposed upon the public. I therefore caution and request all persons desiring to examine carefully all practical improvements in valves or governors, to see if the application of this truth or principle, first discovered and applied by me, is not involved in their arrangements—and thereby prevent a fraud upon the purchaser and inventor, both of which are at present too frequently the result of their ignorant decisions.
